ATLANTA, JANUARY 14, 1865.

INDICATIONS for the south Atlantic states—Fair weather, followed by increasing cloudiness and local rains; northeasterly winds; slight fall, followed by rising temperature.

The chief discussion in the United States now is; was Jefferson Davis a traitor or a patriot? The only thing we heard charged against Mr. Davis during the war was that he was a very poor hotel-keeper.

The startling developments in the Swain court martial should astonish nobody. The members of the court martial have nothing to do but meet, listen to a speech or two and adjourn. Some time in the next century they will reach a conclusion.

A NUMBER of striking artisans in Indiana have organized a riot in which bloodshed may occur. They took forcible possession of the works, and imprisoned one of the leading men. The state troops have been ordered to the scene.

SCHUYLER COFFIN, having dropped out of politics with the notorious gang who surrounded President Grant, died yesterday in Minnesota. He belonged exclusively to the Credit-Mobiler gang of statesmen, whose chief merit lay in hating the south and arranging terms with moneyed corporations.

SENATOR BROWN and Senator VANCE, the two confederate war governors from whom General Sherman expected comfort, in their places in the senate yesterday laid the burden upon other shoulders than those of Jefferson Davis. Senator VANCE, especially, opened up the weakness of General Sherman's case.

"Did St. John sell out?" is a question which is troubling the temperance people and the republicans. The temperance people are concerned that their cause should be mixed up with a scandal; while the republicans are angry at the thought that they did not buy their way into the presidency if there had been a chance to do so.

JEFFERSON DAVIS NOT A TRAITOR.

Is to the eternal honor of several of our southern senators that they had the courage and the manliness to defend on the floor of the senate the name of Jefferson Davis.

The south believed in 1861 that certain rights, which she believed essential, were threatened. To protect those rights she appealed to the arbitrament of the sword. She was defeated, and she accepted as final the verdict of the sword to which she had appealed. This is all that brave men should have demanded—it is certainly all that brave men can yield. If the south should stand in abject silence while the reproach of traitor was laid on the graves of the soldiers who died in her service, and who died happy in the knowledge that they died for her, she would deserve the contempt that all brave men would cast on her. We thank God for the words of our senators!

There is no division of the responsibility of Jefferson Davis and of the men who followed him. He was the chosen leader of the cause to which all were committed. He was loyal to his trust—courageous in leadership, devoted heart, soul and body to his people. He deserves no reproach that they should not share. The humblest soldier who fought behind the stars and bars would not claim immunity from a single aspersion laid on the venerable and defenseless head of his old chieftain. If Mr. Davis was a traitor, we all were traitors, and every assertion of treason that the south lets stand unanswered against his name, stains every monument that rises above the grave of a confederate soldier.

The south has not obstructed this issue. She has earnestly sought to let these things rest. Conscious of her own sincerity and courage, she has been willing to leave her care with history. This personal issue between General Sherman and Mr. Davis has been deliberately used to revive the sectional feeling which twenty years after the war has closed exist only as a reproach to the republic, and a menace to the prosperity of the country at large. It was deliberately intended in our opinion, in the debate in the senate, to use such words towards the south "as no good men would deserve and no brave men would wear." For this the south is not responsible. She has simply maintained her self-respect, and repelled from the memory of her dead heroes and the character of her living leader an aspersion that was as cowardly as it was false, and as mean as it was wanton.

A WORD WITH OUR CITY AUTHORITIES.

Judging from recent developments, there is a regularly organized gang of burglars plying their trade in Atlanta. Scarcely a night passes that some dwelling house is not entered and burglarized. The burglars do not seem to be what may be called sneaks, of his about their work with a boldness, a meeting a deftness that would gain them credit in any calling or pursuit. It is evident they mean business, and it is also evident that they are not to be trifled with.

They are cautious, but at the same time bold, and there is no reason to doubt that they are prepared to commit murder should their victims make any show of resistance.

An instance was given in our local columns yesterday where a citizen discovered a burglar in his bed room. The attitude of the burglar left room for doubt that he was prepared to commit murder if interceded with.

The incident shows that the time has arrived the city must take some steps to protect itself from the nightly raids of these experts.

Now, if the burglars were as quiet and as unobtrusive as the police seem to be, we should have no complaint to make; but, as a matter of fact, there is a degree of ostentation about these house-roberies that is particularly aggravating. The burglars are not as modest and as retiring as our policemen, and the result is that they are permitted to pursue their calling with impunity. Something is lacking—there is inefficiency somewhere; but there seems to be no lack of efficiency on the part of the burglars.

The city authorities must take some action in regard to the matter. The people cannot afford to pay for police protection when they do not enjoy the benefits of it; and, as matters stand, a citizen does not know when he goes to bed whether he will be robbed or not. He only knows that if he is not robbed, the fact is due rather to the indiscretion of the burglars than to vigilance on the part of the police. The situation is serious, and it demands the serious attention of the city authorities. They should speedily amend matters. If necessary, let them offer a reward for the capture of the burglars and house-breakers; if necessary (and it does seem to be necessary), let them secure the services of men who are competent detectives. The city needs the services of detectives who can detect.

Atlanta is no longer a country town, and our police department cannot afford to ignore the benefit that result from organization and discipline. It is the duty of those who have the peace and good order of the city in their keeping to fortify themselves against all sorts of criminals. The citizens pay for protection and they are entitled to protection even at the expense of a little extra inconvenience to the city authorities.

The penitentiary is full of criminals who have made larceny and burglary a study, and the terms of these are constantly expiring.

Our police department should obtain from the keeper of the penitentiary a list of the convicts, and the dates on which their terms expire, and every ex-convict, white or black, who makes his way to Atlanta should be spotted and placed under surveillance.

A little more activity on the part of the city authorities would have the effect of inspiring the police department with the proper degree of energy and enterprise.

As we have said, this is a very serious matter. It calls for prompt action. Whatever is lacking should be speedily supplied. We are perfectly willing that what we have said shall be interpreted as a criticism on our city authorities and the police department. Our columns during the past week show that the burglars and house-breakers have plied their calling with perfect impunity.

This fact shows that either the resources of the police department are at a very low ebb, or that these resources are not properly applied.

There must be a change, and it is better that the city authorities should inaugurate this change than that the citizens should take the matter in their own hands and turn a captured burglar over to the tender mercies of Judge Lynch.

It is possible that there are burglars in Atlanta who have never seen a policeman.

THE socialist case in Chicago has caused Dr. Jeffett Medoff, of the Chicago Tribune, to line his

Young people who think of learning telegraphy need not expect to walk into good positions at high wages. The superintendent of the Western Union office in New York turns off a dozen applicants a day. Girls who have been studying two months apply for positions at $9 per month, when in fact, there are very few female operators who are paid such wages. The majority get $9 or $10, and beginners receive $5. Many of the applicants learn telegraphy in cheap commercial colleges, and these have a good deal more to learn than the police department.

Women who are engaged in this thing do not care for sport without incurring displeasure.

Mr. George Alfred Gath, of the opinion that Conkling will hang himself if somebody will give him a rope. But perhaps this idea is a little too romantic.

WHY should Mr. George Alfred Townsend up end remark that "the journalistic reasoning down south is that if a man is presumed to have a scar like Wilker Booth (provided Booth ever had a scar) and will not take off his hair, he must be some dead man." Now, in what journal "down south" did Master Townsend ever say such reasoning.

A CORRESPONDENT writing from Montreal calls attention to the absence of anything like a genuine national sentiment among the Canadians. The population of the country is composed of French Canadians, English Canadians and newcomers. The French and English have never coalesced, and probably never will. Their blood can never mingle, save as it mingled at Waterloo. Perhaps the Canadian French and Canadian English do not hate each other, but there is certainly no mutual love. They do not mix, mingle, coalesce, intermarry. In Montreal there is a population of 130,000. Of this number 100,000 are French Canadians and 30,000 are English Canadians. The French portion of the city is as distinct from the English portion as Paris is from London. The two sections of the city are separated by language, religion, tastes, conduct, traditions and all that can keep men apart. And yet it has been the labor of statesmen for many generations to fuse these separate peoples into one body strengthened by the sentiment of Canadian nationality. The effort has been a failure. Blood is blood, and the mandates of kings and queens, parliaments and rulers cannot change the likes and dislikes of centuries.

SEEKING A MARKET.

A REMEDY FOR THE OVER-PRODUCTION IN OUR FACTORIES.

The American Exhibit to be Held in London Next Year—The Rush for the Private Secretary of the President-Elect in Washington—The Opposition to Senator Garland.

WASHINGTON, January 13.—[Special.]—An office has been opened in Washington to promote the interests of the American exhibit proposed to be made in London next year. It will be opened in May to continue several months. The object in view is the increase in our foreign trade and it is believed that it can be done by a comprehensive and intelligent display of American manufactures in the world's commercial capital. Over production in almost every branch of manufacture is the admitted cause of much of the present depression. While capital suffers from the stagnation a large per cent of the labor of the country is idle. Hundreds of thousands of men, women and children are out of employment. The plan of the proposed exhibit is to make known the products of the United States in every branch of manufacture. The plan is to have a series of exhibits which will conduct the spectator through the various states, showing their resources and industrial products all the way to San Francisco.

At the same time there will be a similar exhibition of the colonies of England, in some of which the industrial spirit has late become very ambitious.

The United States will thus bring its ambition to bear upon the world.

The effort is an ambitious one, proposing to far outstrip all foreign exhibits hitherto made by this government. Indeed those who saw the United States displays at the world's fairs at Vienna and Paris were ashamed that such a messenger could be labelled an exhibition.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE,

ATLANTA, January 13, 1885.

Money is plentiful at 6 per cent.

By telegraph to The Constitution.

CHICAGO, January 13.—The wheat market opened irregularly, February being 4¢ off and May about the same higher, but both options quickly fell off 1¢ each. The prevailing opinion among the heavy traders was undoubtably bearish, although the number of those who are willing to buy on breaks is by no means small. There is a large increase at all the primary receiving points, showing that the deliveries from first hands are again becoming large. The visible supply decrease last week was due to the arrival of 100,000 bushels. Liverpool was firmly held, but Manila was easier and ed per quarter lower for California off coast, in passage and nearly due, and 3¢ per quarter for red winter for prompt shipment. Receipts for two days, were 399 cars, 23¢ yesterday.

Corn was somewhat weaker and lower to-day, partly in sympathy with wheat and partly because the visible supply showed an increase of 95,000 bushels last week. Receipts to-day were 523 cars, again 42¢ yesterday. The quality did not improve, so as 73 cars graded No. 2, to-day, and percentages equally low have been the rule for some time, but there is a continued good demand which picks up all the No. 3 that is offered. February up to date, 1,200.

March and April are 45¢, while black is 43¢. At 45¢, 500 cars were 42¢; exports 43¢. RAILROAD STOCKS.

Cupid's Reign.

There were not less than three thousand marriages in Georgia during Christmas week. Of this number there was an unusually large number of elopements. In a majority of the cases, however, the erring couples were received back in the parental embrace. There is little doubt but that Georgia will hold her own in the census of 1890.

Mr. A. J. Farmer, of Tallapoosa, has married twelve wives in the last three months.

The Tonys Weekly thus explains a delayed social season:

The wedding, in which two of our old people were to have engaged, did not come off. The old lady is waiting for a set of new teeth which did not arrive according to promise.

A Valdosta correspondent writes:

Quite a sensation was created here by the announcement of a runaway couple from a Quaker man would be married in a few days. The contracting parties are Bartolin Baum, son of a prosperous and wealthy family, and Miss Baldwin, a young girl of good family. About dozen or two hundred guests gathered in front of Judge Coachman's, on Peachtree Avenue. Several gentlemen hurriedly alighted, and in the darkness of the twilight a short observer might have seen the bridegroom, one of the company. This proved to be the eloping bridal party elect, their friends and attendants. Confusion reigned in the Quaker church, for they had gained the portals, and were the guests of Judge Coachman. The Rev. Dr. Kerr, pastor of the Presbyterian church of this place, was a quiet, unassuming man and the happy couple were soon together bound with the silver bands that know no breaking. The Quakers were present, but the marriage was in the hands of some unknown official, but of no avail, for that gentleman of the blue coat, brass buttons and high authority knew not the exact position of the bridegroom, and failed to find it until after the ceremony had been performed. He had only to wire the bride's father, who was a quiet, unassuming man, and the marriage was all hazard, that it was too late as his daughter was married before he could locate them. It is understood that the contracting parties are of age. Baum and his bride have many friends, who present their congratulations.
